Dear Hiring Manager,

Lacoste and Guess are two brands whose online business has to do something genuinely hard: hold a distinct brand world while trading hard enough to grow profitably, and stay coherent whether the customer meets them on the site, in store or on an e-Retail partner. That intersection — brand integrity and commercial discipline in the same calendar — is the work I enjoy most, and it is why the E-Commerce Manager role at Chalhoub Group caught my attention immediately.

As Brand & Marketing Manager at DoFreeze in Dubai, I run our D2C Shopify business end-to-end: assortment and collections, categorisation and product content, pricing, promotions and checkout — steering conversion rate and average order value through data-led online merchandising. I plan and optimise the performance marketing behind it on Meta and Google Ads, moving spend, creative and targeting on ROAS and acquisition-cost data, and I run the same trading calendar across our e-Retail partners (talabat, Noon, Careem, Deliveroo) so pricing and campaign execution stay consistent across channels. I lead a team of two and brief four external agencies, which is the day-to-day version of the cross-functional work this role describes.

Before Dubai, I spent two years at Miravia (Alibaba Group) as Key Account Manager for Beauty, Fragrances and Fashion, managing 42 brand accounts — assortment strategy, pricing, competitive benchmarking and promotions — and growing GMV +30% quarter on quarter. I owned the Flash Sales channel for Beauty, Fashion and Home reporting directly to the CEO, building campaign calendars and item selection against commercial plans aligned to P&L targets. To be straightforward with you: I have run channel economics and cost drivers, not yet a full brand P&L end-to-end — that is precisely the step I am looking to take, and I would bring a numerate, margin-first habit to it from day one. My grounding in fashion is real: I started at Massimo Dutti (Inditex) on the shop floor and helped build Glovo's Retail vertical onboarding fashion and lifestyle brands.

I am already based in Dubai on a UAE residence visa, bilingual Spanish/English, and I would welcome the chance to walk you through how I would approach the trading calendar, the merchandising and site priorities, and the performance-marketing mix for Lacoste and Guess. Thank you for your consideration — I look forward to hearing from you.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
