Dear Hiring Manager,

Holsten's "Georgina's Favourite Treat" turned a global name into neighbourhood gossip at a baqala, and that mix of humour and local detail is the kind of communication I enjoy building. I am applying for the Brand Manager – MEA role because the remit you describe, owning brands from insight and innovation through agency work to performance in market, is what I do today for three FMCG food brands at DoFreeze in Dubai.

I own the brand plans for Befit, Eurocake and Flair across the GCC and more than 50 export markets, built around the moments that move the region: Ramadan, back to school, Fitness Month and New Year. I have taken six products from idea to shelf, covering brief, packaging, pricing and go-to-market. I develop the communication with four agencies and my own team of two, a designer and a social media executive, and I work through local communities as well as individual creators, from running and padel clubs to yoga sessions. A plan only lands in market if sales and distributors carry it, so I build ours with the commercial team channel by channel, across modern trade and quick-commerce.

I judge brand work on sales and volume, not reach. For SMASH on talabat I used Befit as a control brand, same platform and same window with no creators: daily sales rose 165% against 4.7% for the control. On Noon, "New Year, New Me" delivered 4,176 incremental units, 31% over baseline. When an agency's report estimated reach from follower counts and counted the same creator twice, I rebuilt the KPI definitions. My Nielsen grounding comes from category planning at Mondelez, running sell-in/sell-out and promotional-effectiveness analysis behind the Milka Spread and Mini Suchard launches. Two years at Miravia (Alibaba), managing 42 brand accounts and reporting Flash Sales to the CEO, taught me how trade partners read a brand plan.

Beverages would be a new category for me. The brand-building and trade mechanics are the same, and I would bring the habit of tying every campaign to volume. I am based in Dubai on a UAE residence visa and would welcome the chance to discuss how I could contribute to your brands across MEA. Thank you for your consideration.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
