Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm writing about your E-commerce Logistic Manager role. What drew me is that it sits exactly at the intersection I work at every day: running e-commerce operations across an international, distributed setup — in BimmerTech's case Orlando, Dubai and Warsaw — where availability, procurement and order flow have to stay tight for a B2C business to keep its promise to customers. I'm already based in Dubai and immediately available.

The operational spine of this role maps onto my track. As Brand & Marketing Manager at DoFreeze I run e-commerce operations end-to-end — owning a Shopify store (catalogue, availability, listings, checkout) and integrating brands into UAE quick-commerce platforms (Noon, Talabat, Careem, Deliveroo) so orders flow reliably — while coordinating procurement across a 50+ country distributor network, negotiating pricing, terms and delivery schedules with suppliers. I track operational KPIs like product availability and order performance and turn them into process improvements, including AI automation that cut manual workload ~40%. Earlier, at Glovo, I led cross-functional teams across marketing, logistics and customer support to keep orders flowing and volume growing on a quick-commerce platform.

Let me be straight about fit so your time isn't wasted. My strengths for this role are procurement and supplier negotiation, e-commerce and quick-commerce order operations, operational-data/KPI work, process improvement and coordinating distributed international teams. What I have not done is run a physical warehouse or own a WMS such as Unleashed day-to-day — my logistics exposure has been coordinating with fulfillment and last-mile partners rather than managing a warehouse floor. That said, I'm systems-fluent (Shopify, SAP, Salesforce, Power BI), I ramp fast on new platforms, and I take ownership of a workflow end-to-end — so I'd close that gap quickly while contributing on procurement, KPIs and process from week one.

I'd be glad to bring this blend of e-commerce operations, procurement negotiation and data-led process improvement to BimmerTech's logistics function, and to lead your distributed Orlando–Dubai–Warsaw team with the ownership the role asks for. I'm based in Dubai and available to start immediately — I'd welcome a conversation about how I'd approach tightening fulfillment times, costs and availability. Thank you for your consideration.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
