Dear Hiring Manager,

"We are not looking for a traditional marketer" is the line that made me want to write. I'm a marketer who starts from why people do what they do and uses AI to turn that into growth — which is exactly where this role sits, at the intersection of AI, psychology, brand and digital experience. Doing that across two very different businesses — rethinking New Wave Car Wash's journey, membership and messaging, and shaping how Newcleux's AI operating system is experienced, onboarded and adopted — is precisely the founding, build-it-yourself mandate I've been moving toward.

You asked to see something built rather than a résumé, so here's what I've built and what it taught me. At DoFreeze I use generative AI (Claude / GPT) across my whole day — research, content, design, testing, prototyping and analysis — and I built the AI marketing system behind it, which cut manual work ~40% and lets me ship an idea as a live landing page or experiment in hours. I own our Shopify store end-to-end — customer journey, UX, messaging and checkout — and lift conversion and average order value by tuning it to how people actually shop. I also built our influencer programme from zero with no playbook, scaling to 25–50 creators a campaign to earn awareness and trust. Earlier, at Alibaba's Miravia, I grew 42 accounts +30% GMV QoQ by reading consumer behaviour and decision-making, and created loyalty projects (Beauty Club, Hot on Social) that made people want to come back.

What I've learned about people is that data points to friction but rarely explains it — the win is watching where trust breaks in a journey and removing it, whether that's a checkout, an onboarding flow or a first message. I'm comfortable with data but never lose sight of the human behind it, I move quickly, and I'm at my best building without a rigid playbook and owning the outcome. I want to be honest about fit too: my title today is Brand & Marketing Manager rather than a formal growth lead, and my UI/UX and consumer-psychology work is hands-on instinct — Shopify, landing pages, watching real behaviour — rather than formal training. Given how I build and how fast I use AI, that's a head start, not a gap. I'm based in Dubai and fully set up to work remotely with your Abu Dhabi and Chicago team, and I can start immediately.

I'd love to walk you through the AI system and the pages and experiments I've built — and, if useful, put together a quick concept for New Wave or Newcleux so you can see how I'd think about your customers. Thank you for reading; I'd be genuinely excited to help build both businesses.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
