Dear Hiring Manager,

Careem Groceries is exactly the kind of fast, data-driven Q-commerce environment I want to do my best category work in — and it's a world I already know from the inside. As Brand & Marketing Manager at DoFreeze I integrate brands into Careem, Noon, Talabat and Deliveroo day-to-day, and I began my career on a category team at Mondelez doing precisely what this role is built around: turning large volumes of commercial data into insights, reports and decks that shape assortment, pricing and promotion decisions. The Junior Category Executive brief reads like a description of the analytical craft I most enjoy.

The core of this role — being the analytical engine of the category team — is where I'm strongest. At Mondelez I owned sell-in/sell-out and promotional-effectiveness reporting for the chocolate category, building the recurring performance reports that fed business reviews. At Alibaba's Miravia I analysed pricing, assortment, promotions, ROI and conversion across 42 accounts to grow GMV +30% QoQ, and — running the Flash Sales channel reporting to the CEO — I packaged that analysis into performance summaries, data packs and creative decks for senior stakeholders. At DoFreeze I track the exact Q-commerce levers this job lists — sales, pricing, margin, promotions and availability — and I've built AI-powered automation that generates recurring reports and self-serve dashboards, so "automate the reporting and build the dashboards" is already how I work.

Two honest notes, in the spirit of a good hire. First, on tooling: my analytics stack is advanced Excel and Google Sheets plus BI tools (Power BI, Tableau, Looker), and I build dashboards and decks in them today; I don't yet write production SQL, but querying is the natural next step on that foundation and I'd ramp it fast — I pick up data tools quickly and use generative AI to accelerate exactly that. Second, my recent titles are at Manager level, but I'm genuinely drawn to Careem's category and Q-commerce craft and to doing the hands-on analytical work well — I understand the Q-commerce model (ads monetization, margin, promo and rebate mechanics) and I'm happy rolling up my sleeves on the data. I'm already based in Dubai and available to start quickly.

I'd welcome the chance to show how I'd turn category, supplier and customer data into the insights, dashboards and supplier-review decks that keep a Q-commerce category growing. Thank you for considering my application — I'd be glad to walk through how I'd approach the first 90 days on the Careem Groceries category team.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
