Dear Akash Sharma,

I already know Beiersdorf from the other side of the table: at Miravia (Alibaba) I managed the NIVEA account for three months. It was one of 42 beauty and fragrance brands, KIKO Milano among them, with which I agreed visibility, campaign slots, promotions and assortment, growing GMV 30% quarter on quarter across the portfolio. Today I am on the brand side in Dubai, getting three FMCG brands found and bought on talabat, Noon and Careem. That is why I am applying for the Ecommerce Shopper and Customer Marketing Manager role in your Middle East team.

At DoFreeze I build the activation plan with each platform: listings, pricing, promotional mechanics and joint activations such as a purchase-linked cashback giveaway with talabat and seasonal sampling. When we launched SMASH on talabat, I kept another of our brands out of the campaign so we could read what the campaign alone had done: daily sales rose 165% against 4.7% for the control. On Noon, our "New Year, New Me" event for Befit added 4,176 incremental units, 31% over baseline. Because none of that works without stock, I run a weekly review of stock risk by dark store, checking PO coverage against demand, and I own our Shopify store end-to-end, from product content to checkout.

I built our creator programme from zero to 25 to 50 creators per campaign, with sampling and seeding measured on sell-out rather than reach, which is the base I would bring to your social commerce pilots. I lead a team of two and manage four influencer agencies, where I negotiated 30% off across our creator campaigns. I also built an AI workflow with Claude for planning, content and reporting that cut our manual work by about 40%. My analytical grounding comes from category planning at Mondelez, measuring sell-in, sell-out and promotional effectiveness.

I want to be clear about the tools: I have not used Salsify or Profitero, and my work on content has been on our own store and on the platforms rather than through a syndication system. The work those tools support, content readiness, availability and reading what a promotion returned, is what I do every week, and I would expect to learn the systems quickly. I am based in Dubai and would welcome a conversation. Thank you for your consideration.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
