Dear Hiring Manager,

I would like to apply for the Ecommerce Product Catalog & Research Analyst role. Keeping product data accurate is already part of my week: at DoFreeze, a UAE food group, I run our Shopify catalogue and our listings on Careem, talabat and Noon. I am based in the UAE and work well independently, which suits a remote role.

On Shopify I set up products with pricing, descriptions, images and collections, and I keep our quick-commerce listings current as products and prices change. At Alibaba's Miravia I onboarded more than 30 fragrance stores in two months, checking product data, pricing and presentation against marketplace guidelines,, and grew 42 brand accounts by 30% GMV quarter on quarter. I also built an automation with Claude that gathers market research and produces our KPI reports, cutting manual work by about 40%. Using AI tools to research, extract and check information is how I work every day.

To be transparent: I have not used Magento, and my catalogues have been food, beauty and fashion rather than IT hardware, software or cloud products. What transfers is the method: reading a source carefully, turning specifications into clear product content, and auditing a catalogue for errors. I learn new platforms and product categories quickly, and I follow AI products closely because I use them.

I would welcome the chance to discuss the role. Thank you for your consideration.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
