Dear Hiring Manager,

Ounass is building a creative operation that produces more, moves faster and works smarter by putting AI and automation at its core — and that is exactly the problem I spend my days solving. As the definitive home of luxury in the Middle East and part of the Al Tayer Group, you pair a digital-first, high-AOV e-commerce engine with genuinely high creative standards, and the Creative Operations Manager role — owning workflow, process, resourcing and the AI agenda behind the Creative team — maps directly onto how I already work.

At DoFreeze I built and own an AI-powered marketing-automation system (Claude / generative AI) that turned campaign planning, content, research and reporting into standardised, repeatable workflows — cutting manual workload by around 40% and letting a lean team scale output across 50+ markets without adding headcount at the same rate. I design and document the briefing formats, templates and approval flows behind our content and campaign production, run end-to-end project management on six NPD launches, and plan resourcing across always-on and seasonal peaks — briefing and coordinating 25–50 creators and cross-functional teams against tight, concurrent deadlines. Before that, at Alibaba's Miravia, I ran high-volume campaign and content production across 42 beauty, fashion and fragrance accounts on a luxury/fashion marketplace.

Two things make me a strong fit for how you want this role to work. First, I am genuinely AI-first — not someone who will 'explore' automation, but someone who has already built it, embedded it in a team's daily workflow and trained others on it, which is precisely the AI-and-automation agenda this role is built around. Second, I grew up inside fashion and e-commerce — Inditex/Massimo Dutti, Alibaba's Miravia and a Shopify store I run end-to-end — so luxury standards, catalogue, collections and asset workflows are native to me. I'll be candid on two points: my background is in brand, content and e-commerce operations rather than a formal creative-production department, and my hands-on design is in Canva and generative-AI tools rather than deep Adobe craft. What I bring is the operating system around creative — the workflows, SOPs, resourcing, project management, KPIs and AI tooling that free creative talent to focus on the work — and I ramp fast.

I would be excited to bring this blend of AI-and-automation fluency, systems thinking and luxury e-commerce experience to the Creative Operations function at Ounass, and to help the team produce more and move faster without compromising the standards that define the brand. I am already based in Dubai and available immediately, and I would welcome the chance to discuss how I would approach your creative workflows, DAM and AI roadmap. Thank you for your consideration — I look forward to hearing from you.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
