Dear Hiring Manager,

Building a skincare brand for the European market is a brief I can speak to from both sides. For two years at Alibaba's Miravia I managed beauty and fragrance brands for European consumers — learning the market's trends and buying behaviour first-hand — and I now build brands end-to-end at DoFreeze, from identity through go-to-market. Your start-up's ambition to grow a skincare brand across Europe is exactly the kind of build I want to lead.

At DoFreeze I own brand strategy, positioning, identity and tone of voice, and I run NPD end-to-end — six launches through brief, packaging, pricing and go-to-market across 50+ markets. I built our influencer programme from zero to 25–50 creators per campaign with sampling and seeding, and I own the Shopify store and its conversion rate. At Miravia I managed 42 beauty, fragrance and fashion accounts to +30% GMV QoQ and created the Beauty Club and Hot on Social brand projects — so I balance brand-building with the performance and commercial results a scaling business needs.

What I'd bring to a fast-moving start-up is exactly that blend: a marketer who builds the brand — identity, packaging, tone — and is equally comfortable owning paid media, e-commerce, influencer and the ROI behind them, with generative-AI automation (Claude/GPT) to move faster on content and campaigns. My hands-on beauty and fragrance work is adjacent to pure skincare, but the brand-building, European-market and launch craft transfer directly. I'm based in Dubai on a UAE residence visa and able to move quickly.

I'd love to talk through how I'd shape the brand's positioning and a first go-to-market for the European market. Thank you for considering my application — I'm keen to help build this from the ground up.

Best regards,
