Dear Hiring Manager,

noon's mission — every door, every day — runs on people who can own a category end-to-end and make the numbers move, and that's exactly the work I love. I'm an e-commerce category and account manager who has already done this role's twin: at Alibaba's Miravia I owned 42 brand accounts on a top-5 marketplace, growing GMV +30% QoQ. And I know noon from the other side of the table — I integrate and grow brands on noon today from Dubai — so I understand your marketplace mechanics from the vendor seat, which is a useful head start for owning a category from the inside.

The responsibilities map almost one-to-one onto what I've done. At Miravia I drove category growth and selection discoverability, led a category expansion that onboarded 30+ new vendors in two months, acted as the main point of contact for key brands and aligned joint business plans, and ran promotions and merchandising (owning the Flash Sales channel, reporting to the CEO) to lift traffic and conversion — all steered by constant analysis of conversion, traffic, ROI and ROAS plus competitive benchmarking. At DoFreeze I now manage selection, availability, pricing and promo mechanics across UAE marketplaces (noon, Talabat, Careem, Deliveroo), coordinating replenishment and retail execution with operations. I'm fluent in Excel and Power BI, and I built an AI-powered system (Claude) that speeds up my reporting and benchmarking — useful in a bias-for-action environment.

One honest note so we're clear-eyed: my category depth is beauty, fragrances, fashion and FMCG rather than electronics and hardlines — but category and account management is a craft that travels, the requirements here are the ones I've lived (vendor management, JBPs, selection, promotions, analytics), and I'd get up the electronics learning curve fast. What I bring beyond the checklist is a genuine insider-outsider view of noon, quick-commerce fluency in this exact market, and the resourceful, hands-on, learn-fast attitude your team is built around.

I'd be excited to own an Electronics category at noon's scale and prove it in selection, availability and conversion — and I can share commercial case studies and results (from +30% GMV QoQ to category expansion and promotional wins). I'm based in Dubai and ready to move fast. Thank you for your consideration — I look forward to hearing from you.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
