Dear Hiring Manager,

The eCom Operations Manager brief — own day-to-day e-commerce operations, build SOPs and systems that let a lean team scale, remove bottlenecks and turn operational challenges into practical solutions with high autonomy — describes the operational side of what I do every day. I'm an operator who builds systems rather than just maintaining them, I'm comfortable owning problems end-to-end, and I'm set up for autonomous remote work with a global team.

At DoFreeze I run core e-commerce operations end-to-end: I own the Shopify store — catalogue, product information, stock, pricing, promotions and checkout — and I coordinated onboarding our brands into UAE quick-commerce platforms (Noon, Talabat, Careem, Deliveroo), managing listings, promo mechanics, stock and retail execution across channels. Just as importantly, I build systems: I designed an AI-powered automation system (Claude/GPT) that turned manual, ad-hoc work into documented, repeatable workflows for planning, content, research and reporting — cutting manual workload by roughly 40% so a lean team can scale. Across Glovo and Alibaba's Miravia I coordinated cross-functional operations (logistics, support, commercial), juggling many priorities in fast-moving, high-growth environments while keeping projects and deliverables on track.

I want to be straight about fit. My titles have been in marketing and commercial rather than dedicated operations, and end-to-end supply-chain/logistics ownership is adjacent to my work rather than my core — I wouldn't overclaim it. What I bring honestly is the operator's craft the role is really about: owning e-commerce operations hands-on, building and documenting SOPs and systems from the ground up, coordinating cross-functional work, spotting bottlenecks and driving solutions to execution, all with a high degree of autonomy and ownership. The DTC health & wellness sector would be new but adjacent to my FMCG, beauty and e-commerce background, and I ramp quickly. I have excellent communication (English C1) and a detail-oriented, continuous-improvement mindset.

I'd welcome a conversation about how I'd approach the first 90 days — mapping the current operations, documenting the highest-leverage SOPs first, and removing the bottlenecks that most slow the business down — and about where my e-commerce-operations and systems-building experience is the strongest match. I'm set up for focused, autonomous remote work across time zones. Thank you for considering my application.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
