01 — THE GAP

Healthcare brands face unique trust barriers in UAE market

Opella's OTC portfolio — Allegra, Buscopan, Dulcolax — operates in a market where consumers research symptoms in Arabic but find brand communication in English. The disconnect is measurable.

UAE healthcare advertising requires MOHAP compliance, Ramadan-sensitive messaging, and cultural adaptation that generic FMCG playbooks miss. Consumer trust builds through local relevance, not global templates.

02 — THE ANSWER

Build healthcare brands like culture-first consumer products

Healthcare marketing succeeds when brands speak to daily life, not clinical features. UAE consumers choose Panadol over alternatives because the brand understands local pain points — work stress, weather changes, social obligations.

03 — THE PLAN

Three phases. Six months.

Market research, brand positioning, and scaled activation across Opella's priority UAE portfolio.

01

MONTHS 1-2

UAE market mapping

Consumer healthcare journey mapping across emirates. MOHAP compliance audit for current materials. Pharmacy partnership assessment. Arabic content gap analysis for Allegra, Buscopan, and Dulcolax positioning versus local competitors.

02

MONTHS 3-4

Brand localisation

Culturally-adapted messaging frameworks. Arabic-first content creation for digital channels. Pharmacy education materials development. Influencer and healthcare professional partnership strategy for trust-building campaigns.

03

MONTHS 5-6

Market activation

Integrated campaign launch across Noon, Careem, and traditional pharmacy channels. Performance tracking dashboard implementation. Modern trade partnership expansion. Quick-commerce platform optimisation for healthcare product discovery.
