Dear Hiring Manager,

Puig's fragrance houses — Byredo, Jean Paul Gaultier, Rabanne, Penhaligon's, Carolina Herrera — are the brands I admire most, so the Marketing Graduate Programme in the Middle East is genuinely exciting to me. Fragrance is my passion and my specialism, and I'd throw myself into a two-year journey across these houses.

Every part of the programme maps to work I already do hands-on: supporting 360 launches on the marketing calendar, maintaining assortments and price lists, forecasting, running sampling and GWP activations, and preparing brand reviews and competitor reports. As PIC Fragrances at Miravia I worked with the official distributors of leading Arabian and oud houses (Arabian Oud, Lattafa, Swiss Arabian, Ajmal), so I understand the Gulf fragrance consumer your niche houses speak to.

In full honesty, I bring more hands-on experience than a typical graduate — but I'm applying with open eyes and real enthusiasm: I want to learn the Puig way across this portfolio and grow with the brands. I'm a CUNEF Business graduate (E-Commerce & Fashion specialisation, 9.5/10 thesis), Dubai-based on a UAE residence visa, fluent in Spanish and English, and ready to contribute from day one.

Given Puig's openness to candidates with transferable skills, I'd love the chance to discuss how my fragrance passion and marketing experience fit the Graduate Programme. I'm available to interview at your convenience and based in Dubai. Thank you for your consideration.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
