Dear Hiring Manager,

Byredo is one of the fragrance houses I most admire, and the chance to grow it in the UAE under Puig brings together the two threads of my career: a genuine fragrance specialism and a love of luxury retail. As PIC Fragrances at Alibaba's Miravia and Inditex-trained at Massimo Dutti, I'd be excited to bring commercial and brand rigour to Byredo's retail business.

On the commercial side I'd hit the ground running. At Miravia I owned profitability for 42 beauty and fragrance accounts, growing GMV +30% QoQ and running the Flash Sales channel to P&L targets, while leading the fragrance category and building the Beauty Club — a segmented clienteling/CRM programme to grow loyalty and lifetime value. Having managed leading Arabian and oud houses (Arabian Oud, Lattafa, Swiss Arabian, Ajmal) through their official distributors, I understand the Gulf fragrance consumer that Byredo's oud lines speak to — fragrance profiling, assortment and luxury storytelling are second nature to me.

In full honesty, my background is brand, commercial and key-account leadership rather than multi-site store management — I have not yet led a network of Store Managers. What I bring instead is sharp commercial and P&L ownership, deep fragrance and clienteling expertise, and an Inditex-trained luxury-service foundation, plus the cross-functional team leadership I built at Glovo. I'm Dubai-based on a UAE residence visa, bilingual in Spanish and English, and motivated to grow into full retail leadership with Byredo.

Given Puig's openness to candidates with transferable skills, I'd welcome the chance to discuss how my commercial, fragrance and luxury-service strengths can drive Byredo's retail growth in the UAE. I'm available to interview at your convenience and can start immediately. Thank you for your consideration.

Best regards,

Paula De Francisco Pérez
